43* Franklin Polar Expedition. Original manuscript instructions for the building of 4 boats used on the Rae-Richardson Arctic Expedition of 1848, the first a document dated at Portsmouth Yard, 23 April 1847, giving details of 'Dimensions and scantlings of two boats to be built by Contract for the Arctic Expedition' at Portsmouth Dockyard, then giving a list of materials and sizes with further text below, 'The boats to be built of the very best seasoned materials, as light as possible, consistent with strength, and to be fitted according to the usage of the dockyard, or as shall be pointed out by the surveying officer; the fastenings to be copper throughout. The boats to be finished in all respects, in a workmanlike manner, and to be such as shall be approved of by the officers of the dockyard', the boats to be delivered to store by 15 May 1847, 1 page with integral blank leaf (watermark date 1846), together with a second single sheet giving dimensions and scantlings for two similar boats to be built for the Expedition by Mr Camper [at Gosport], 1 page; a third sheet (paper watermark date 1839), giving summary technical details of all 4 boats, plus 'Draught of Water' and details of 4 tool chests and their contents, including axe (1), adze (1), hand vice (2), oil stone (1), hemp (7.5 lbs), hand saw files (6), small chisels (8), compasses (2), etc., 2 pages with integral blank, all folio, plus a fourth sheet titled 'The Arctic boats are numbered 1, 2, 3 & 4 inside their Sternposts' with brief listings of each below, signed by J[ohn] Whettam [shipwright, Portsmouth Dockyard] and addressed to W[illiam] Rice, 1 page, 4to, the last two items with a few rough pencil calculations and some spotting, loosely contained in slightly frayed old wrapping (watermark date 1819) with a later manuscript note about the contents, dated May 1900

The Rae-Richardson Arctic expedition of 1848 was an early British effort to determine the fate of the lost Franklin Polar Expedition of 1845. Part of a three-pronged rescue effort devised by the British Admiralty this expedition was led overland by Sir John Richardson and John Rae, the team exploring the accessible areas along Franklin's proposed route near the Mackenzie and Coppermine rivers. Although no direct contact with Franklin's forces was achieved, Rae later interviewed the Inuit of the region and obtained credible accounts that the desperate members of Franklin's team had resorted to cannibalism.

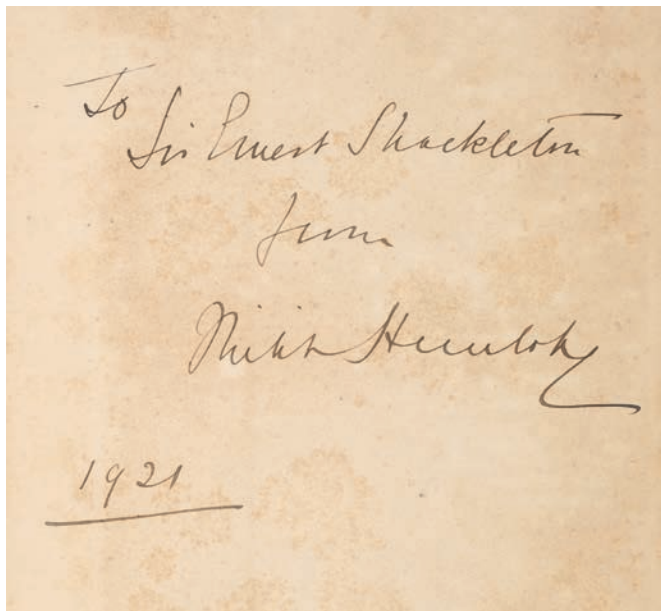

Details about the ordering and the construction of the 4 boats used on the expedition is recorded by John Richardson in Arctic Searching Expedition..., 2 volumes, Longman, Brown, Green & Longmans, 1851, pp. 40-42. Technically demanding and innovative the boats had to be both lightweight and sea-worthy and Richardson commends William Rice, 'Assistant Master Builder of Portsmouth Yard, for the care and skill with which he worked out a successful result'.

The first sheet with the Portsmouth Dockyard dimensions is dated 23 April 1847. This was exactly one month before the 'Victory Point Note' was written, following Franklin's first overwintering. It ends: 'Sir John Franklin commanding the expedition. All well. Party consists of 2 officers and 6 men left the ships on Monday 24th May, 1847', and is signed by Gore and De Voieux. It was found eleven years later in May 1859 by William Hobson with a second part, dated 25 April 1848, noting the death of Sir John Franklin, this time signed by Captains Crozier and Fitzjames.

48* Banks (Joseph, 1743-1820). English naturalist, botanist and patron of the natural sciences. An original autograph draft of a letter to Sir Joseph Banks from Lord Melville (1771-1851), First Lord of the Admiralty, acknowledging the receipt of his report on the then favourable conditions in the far north for the prosecution of Arctic discovery, 10 December 1817, together with his manuscript copy of Sir Joseph Banks' report, (the original presumably having been passed over to the Admiralty), 29 November 1817, Sir Joseph Banks writes: 'It will without doubt have come to your Lordship's knowledge that a considerable change of Climate, inexplicable at present to us, must have taken place in the circumpolar regions, by which the severity of the cold that has for centuries past inclosed the seas in the high northern Latitudes in an impenetrable barrier of Ice, has been during the last two years greatly abated', giving an account of [William] Scoresby's observations on the melting ice and considering the opportunities this affords, 'The Prince Regent's Government ... no doubt ... will be ready to avail itself of the favourable opportunity which now appears to have occurred to endeavour to correct and amend the very defective geography of the Arctic Regions, more especially on the side of America. To attempt the circumnavigation of old Greenland, if an Island or Islands as there is reason to suppose. To prove the existence or non-existence of Baffin's Bay; and to endeavour to ascertain the practicability of a passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, along the Northern Coast of North America', etc., etc., Lord Melville, in his reply, writes: 'The circumstances to which you have adverted have not failed to engage the attention of the Board of Admiralty, and we have deemed it our duty, in conformity with your suggestion, to give orders for the fitting out of four vessels of proper size and construction to be in readiness to sail on the 1st March with a view to the important objects stated in your letter. Our present intention is that two of them should proceed into Davis's Straights and from thence in a North Westerly direction, and that the other two should proceed along the Coast of East Greenland, and if practicable afterwards to the Westward', 2 pages (Melville's draft letter) and 6 pages (copy of Banks' report), folio, plus an unrelated manuscript document, signed on board His Majesty's Sloop Chanticleer by Henry Foster, the commander, Deception Harbour, South Shetland, [Antarctic Peninsula], 31 January 1820, concerning store checking and accounts, some spotting, 1 page, folio Provenance: Robert Aston (16th century); Frances Wolfreston (1607-1677); presumably Sotheby's, 1856, lot 328; D. L. Cumming (20th century). STC 19907; Pforzheimer 798.

Frances Wolfreston, who lived near Tamworth, north-east of Birmingham, is one of the earliest-recorded English female book collectors without aristocratic lineage. A large portion of her library was sold at auction by Sotheby's in 1856. The present work appears to be the copy listed as unlocated on <https://franceswolfrestonhorbooks.com>, although it is there described as 'imperfect; lacking the title, a 'portion' of A Brief Sum[m]le of the Principal Poyntes, and all after T4'. This copy however lacks all before B1, and four leaves at the end, in addition to three other leaves within the text.

Over the past thirty years, Paul Morgan, Arnold Hunt, and Sarah Lindenbaum have identified over two hundred works, mostly literary, containing Wolfreston's standard ownership inscription: 'frances wolfreston hor bouk'. The bibliophile William Carew Hazlitt wrote about the Sotheby's auction in 1856 in his Four generations of a literate family: The Hazlitts in England, Ireland and America (1897): 'I can just recall the Wolfreston sale in 1856... I was not actually present, but I heard a good deal about it soon afterward. It was a small collection of early English books and tracts formed under the Tudors or early Stuarts; the copies were often uncut, and as often imperfect or dog's-eared. But there were among them a few startling rarities...'. The printer and controversialist Robert Crowley was the first to publish a printed edition of Langland's Piers Plowman, which had previously only existed in manuscript form. Crowley's introductory matter and printed marginal notes present the work in the context of his own radical anticlerical Protestantism, as a prophetic account of the Reformist doctrine. The present copy is one of two versions of the second edition, both published by Crowley in the same year as his first edition, this copy with the word time spelt 'time' instead of 'tyme', and the signatures of the preliminary leaves, as well as the foliation, completely regularized. As Pforzheimer notes, 'The editions published by Crowley are of Skeats's so-called 'B-text' and are of interest and importance equal to that of the manuscripts which have survived.

117 Blundeville (Thomas, 1522?-1606?). A Briefe Description of Universal Mappes and Cardes, and of Their Use: and also of the use of Ptholemey his Tables. Necessarye for those that delight in reading of histories: and also for travellers by land or sea, 1st edition, London: Printed by Roger Ward for Thomas Cadman, 1589, [22] leaves, woodcut device on title, black letter, folding woodcut plate of the mariner's quadrant at rear (old ink stain to lower left margin), initials and ornaments, running heads shaved, small tear with loss to blank lower margin of B4, bound as the eighth work in a sammelband with 9 other contemporary surveying, cosmographical and astronomical works by Thomas Hill (1599), Edward Worsop (1582), Edward Wright (1613), Valentine Leigh (1592), Leonard Digges (2 works: 1592 & [?1596]), Thomas Hood (2 works: 1590), Thomas Oliver (1601), contemporary ownership signature of [Viscount] Campden to title of first work, contemporary plain calf, heavily rubbed, leather along fore-edge of upper cover lifting with exposure of board beneath, 4to (178 x 135 mm)

An extraordinary Elizabethan sammelband of rare scientific works in a contemporary binding. The texts have been very carefully cut down for binding with occasional shaving of running heads, signature marks and sometimes touching or shaving larger illustrations and tables. However, the binder has been sensitive enough to trim around these occasional larger page extensions and fold the edges into the text. Even more remarkable is the completeness of the texts with one table (and initial blank) lacking from the work by Leigh and the two very rarely found star charts in the first work by Hood being the notable absences.

Provenance: [Viscount] Campden (boldly signed 'Campden' to title). There is ambiguity as to which Viscount Campden this might have been. Baptist Hicks, 1st Viscount Campden (1551-1629), was an English cloth merchant and politician who was created a baronet in 1620. His son-in-law Edward Noel succeeded to the title and he was in turn succeeded on his death in 1643 by his son, Baptist Noel (1611-1682), a politician and military commander. There are two later ownership signatures to the initial blank verso: 'Robert Winckles his book 1716. Price 5 shillings' (similarly inscribed to front pastedown); and 'Thomas Banning his book 1817'.

There are two further 17th-century ink ownership signatures of Robert Hillary ('Ro: Hillarye') and 'V. W.' on the title-page of the first work by Thomas Hood.

Hill (Thomas, c. 1528–c. 1574). The Schoole of Skil: Containing Two Bookes: the first, of the sphere, of heaven, of the starres, of their Orbes, and of the Earth, &c. the second, of the sphericall elements, of the celestiall Circles, and of their vses, &c., 1st edition, T. Judson for W. Jaggard, 1599, [8], 267, [5]pp., initial blank (with signature mark 'A' to centre of recto) present, woodcut vignette of an armillary sphere to title (old wax stain touching right edge of sphere, imprint date scratched away with old ink manuscript date '1712' inscribed to its left), largely printed in black letter, woodcut illustrations, diagrams, initials and decorations, small burn hole to B8 with loss of a few letters to two words on recto and verso not affecting sense, curious small paper adhesion with dark ink stain to E7v obscuring page number '62' and first word of first line, 17th-century ownership signature of [Viscount] Campden to title and later ownership signatures of Robert Winckles and Thomas Banning to initial blank verso, dated 1716 and 1817 respectively

Signatures: A4 B–S8.

ESTC S104125; STC 13502; Taylor, Mathematical Practitioners of Tudor & Stuart England 98.

In this posthumously printed mathematical and astronomical textbook Hill explicitly rejects Copernicanism and, with Thomas Blundeville, was the only other 16th-century astronomical writer of note to do so. On page 158 appears a description of America and on page 259 an account of Peru.

Worsop (Edward). A Discoverie of Sundrie Errours and Faults Daily Committed by Land-meaters, Ignorant of Arithmetike and Geometrie, to the damage, and preiudice of many her Maiesties subiects, with manifest prooffe that none ought to be admitted to that function, but the learned practicioners of those sciences: written dialoguewise, according to a certaine communication had of that matter, 1st edition, Henrie Middleton for Gregorie Seton, 1582, [76]pp., title within typographical border, woodcut initials and diagrams, closely trimmed at upper and outer margins, affecting upper margin of title border and some running heads, four leaves neatly trimmed and folded at foremargins (B3, D1–2, H1), paper flaw at foot of B3 with small piece of paper with letterpress torn away but present

Signatures: A–I4 K2.

ESTC S120271; STC 25997; Taylor, Mathematical Practitioners 186.

According to Taylor it was John Dee's plea for the practical aspects of mathematics which had a huge influence on the surveying ideas of Worsop. This rare work, (ESTC locates 3 copies in UK and 1 in North America), is dedicated to William Cecil.

Wright (Edward, bap. 1561–1615). The Description and Use of the Sphaere Deuided into Three Principal Partes: whereof the first intreateth especially of the circles of the uppermost moveable sphaere ... the second sheweth the plentifull use of the uppermost sphaere ... the third conteyneth the description of the orbes whereof the sphaeres of the sunne and moone have beene supposed to be made, with their motions and uses, 1st edition, [Edward Allde] for Iohn Tap, 1613, [8], 104pp., full-page woodcut illustration of an armillary sphere, a few woodcut initials and decorations

Signatures: A–O4.

ESTC S120188; STC 26021.

Edward Wright was an eminent mathematician and cartographer who temporarily interrupted his studies to go on the Azores Voyage of 1589 under the earl of Cumberland. 'His Description and Use of the Sphaere (1613), about a kind of armillary sphere, can be read as a guide to the use of a kind of instrument, but it was specifically written as the manual for the use of one instance of it, the one built for Prince Henry' (ODNB).

Leigh (Valentine, died 1563). The Moste Profitable and Commendable Science, of Surveying of Lands, Tenementes, and Hereditamentes..., Newly Imprinted and Corrected, [5th edition], John Windet, for Robert Dexter, 1592, [118]pp., woodcut device on title, woodcut diagrams and initials, folding table at rear, lacks initial blank and second table, a few running heads shaved, lower outer corner of M4 torn with blank loss not affecting text

Signatures: A–G4 [–A1 blank] I–Q4, 1 [of 2] folded tables.

ESTC S108414 [120 pp., also noting absence of signature H]; STC 15419.

Leigh's most significant work, the first edition of this practical, popular guide on surveying appeared in 1577, and was praised by John Norden in The Surveiors Dialogue, 1610.

Digges (Leonard, c. 1515–c. 1559). A Booke Named Tectonicon, briefly shewing the exact measuring, and spedie reckoning all maner of land, squares, timber, stone, steeples, pillers, globes, &c. ..., [?7th edition], Printed by Thomas Orwin, 1592, [2], 26 leaves, woodcut diagrams and initials, 2 folding tables, neatly trimmed and folded foremargin at A4 and lower margins at E3/4, blank paper loss to lower outer corner of G1

Signatures: A–G4, 2 folded tables.

First published by John Day in 1556[?].
ESTC S114117; STC 6851.

The mathematician Leonard Digges was an important member of the first generation of English mathematical authors to publish in the vernacular. Only two of his works were printed during his lifetime, a popular almanac and a short treatise on mensuration, both of which appeared in the 1550s. However, his interest in practical mathematics had been established much earlier" (ODNB).

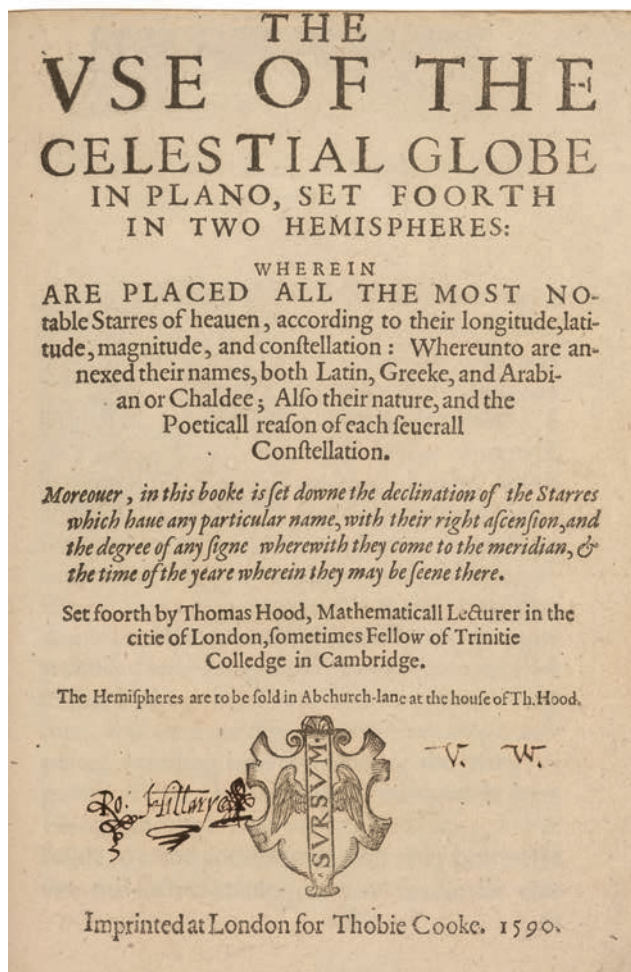

Digges (Leonard, c. 1515–c. 1559). A Prognostication Everlasting of Right Good Effect, fruitfully augmented by the Author, contayning plaine, briefe, pleasant, chosen rules to iudge the weather by the sunne, moone, starres, comets, rainbow, thunder, clowdes, with other extraordinary tokens, not omitting the aspects of planets, with a briefe iudgement for euer, of plentie, lacke, sicknes, dearth, warres, &c. opening also many naturall causes worthie to be knowne. To these and other now at the last, are ioyned diuers generall pleasant tables ... Lately corrected and augmented by Thomas Digges his sonne, [?Printed by the Widow Orwin, 1596], [2], 42, [12] leaves, large woodcut astrological illustration to title, largely printed in black letter, woodcut illustrations, diagrams, initials and decorations, folding woodcut plate of the Copernican universe (signed M3 and foliated 43) bound at end, some leaves closely trimmed at foot, with loss of imprint details to title, also touching illustration at foot of F1, tables at L1/2 and several signature marks, 14 leaves neatly trimmed and folded at foremargins or lower margins (A3–4, B1–2, E1–2, F3, G3–4, H1–2, K1–2, L2)

Signatures: A–O4, folding woodcut.

Following the edition of 1576, editions of the Prognostication appeared over the next 30 years, each of which is known in a handful of copies, and in many cases lacking the diagram. This edition appears to be the 1596 edition and is complete with the celebrated diagram, so often lacking in recorded copies of all editions of the work where called for. Digges not only supports the Copernican theory, but in addition advocates cosmological infinity, a feature not explicitly affirmed by Copernicus. It is the very first illustration to depict an infinite universe and all editions of the Prognostication that feature it reuse the same woodblock of 1576, with very minor differences.

Hood (Thomas, bap. 1556–1620). The Use of the Celestial Globe in Plano, Set Foorth in Two Hemispheres: wherein are placed all the most notable starres of heaven..., 1st edition, [John Windet] for Thobie Cooke, 1590, [4], 43], [1] leaves, woodcut device to title, lacks 2 star charts (as usual), lower outer corner of A3 torn with blank loss not affecting text, final blank present, 17th-century ink ownership signature of 'Ro: Hillarye' and additional letters 'V. W.' to title

Signatures: A-M4, lacks 2 folding charts.

ESTC S118875; STC 13697.

Thomas Hood was an English mathematician and physician who in 1588 became the first lecturer in mathematics to be appointed in England. Of the small number of copies appearing at auction in the last century none appear to have had the two star charts.

'Hood's works demonstrate both his wide range of interests and his skill as a teacher. He wrote two texts concerning globes, which were just beginning to become widely available: The Use of the Celestial Globe in Plano, Set Foorth in Two Hemispheres (1590) was largely intended to help the student astronomer to recognize the stars and their constellations; The Use of Both the Globes Celestiall and Terrestriall (1592) supplied definitions and applications for both astronomy and geography' (ODNB).

Blundeville (Thomas, 1522?–1606?). A Briefe Description of Universal Mappes and Cardes, and of Their Use: and also the use of Ptholemy his Tables. Necessarie for those that delight in reading of histories: and also for travelers by land or sea, 1st edition, Roger Ward for Thomas Cadman, 1589, see description above

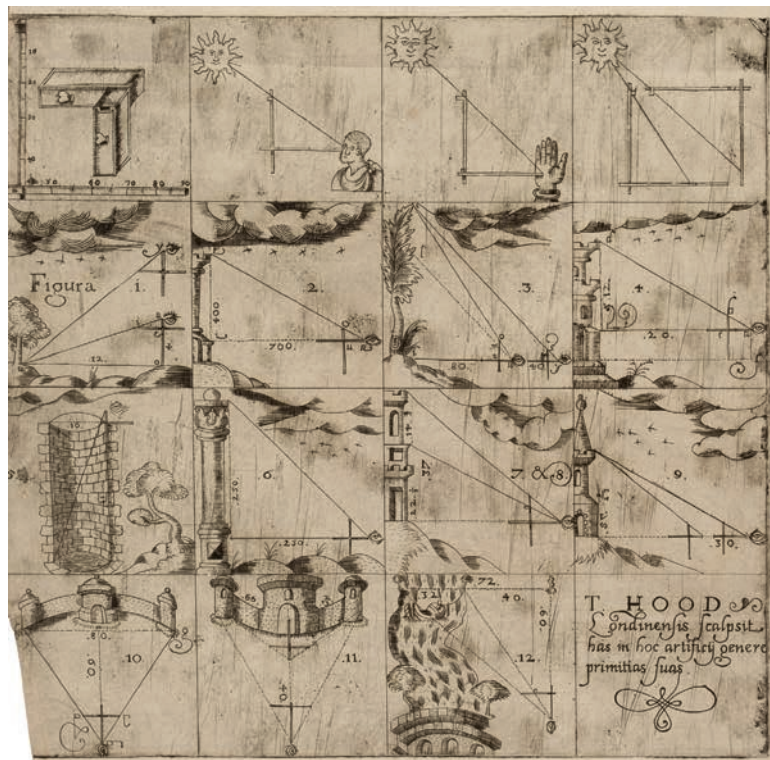

Signatures: A-E4 F2, folding table.

Alden & Landis 589/10; Church 137; ESTC S104621; Graesse I:444; Sabin 6022; STC 3145; Taylor, Mathematical Practitioners 71.

Very rare, especially with the folding plate. The most recent complete copy at auction was the Horblit/Streeter copy sold by Christie's, New York, 16 April 2007, lot 47 (US$72,000).

Thomas Blundeville was an author and translator whose interests included mathematics and navigation. 'He had been a mathematics tutor in the households of Sir Nicholas Bacon and Justice Francis Wyndham for a time, and among his friends were some of the leading mathematicians of the age, including John Dee and Henry Briggs. His navigational writings were principally directed towards young gentlemen, providing instruction on astronomy, maps, and instruments' (ODNB).

'This work contains curious notices of the situation of America, the Azores Islands, etc. The discovery of America and circumnavigation of the world are alluded to on the verso of B3 and subsequently throughout the work. Quaritch offered a copy, bound up with six other pamphlets, in 1899. Graesse, Lowndes, and Sabin are the only other bibliographies that seem to have been aware of its existence [at that time]' (Church).

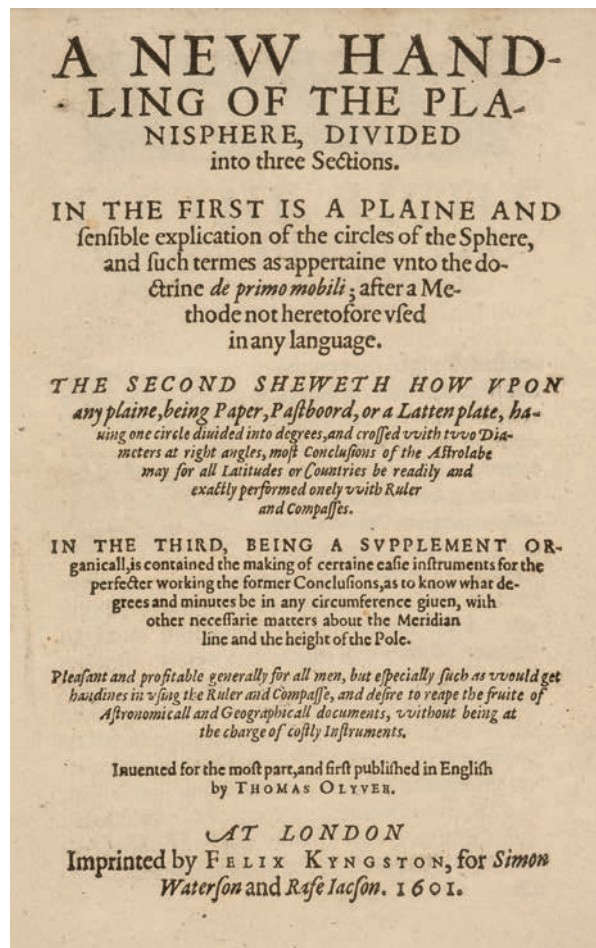

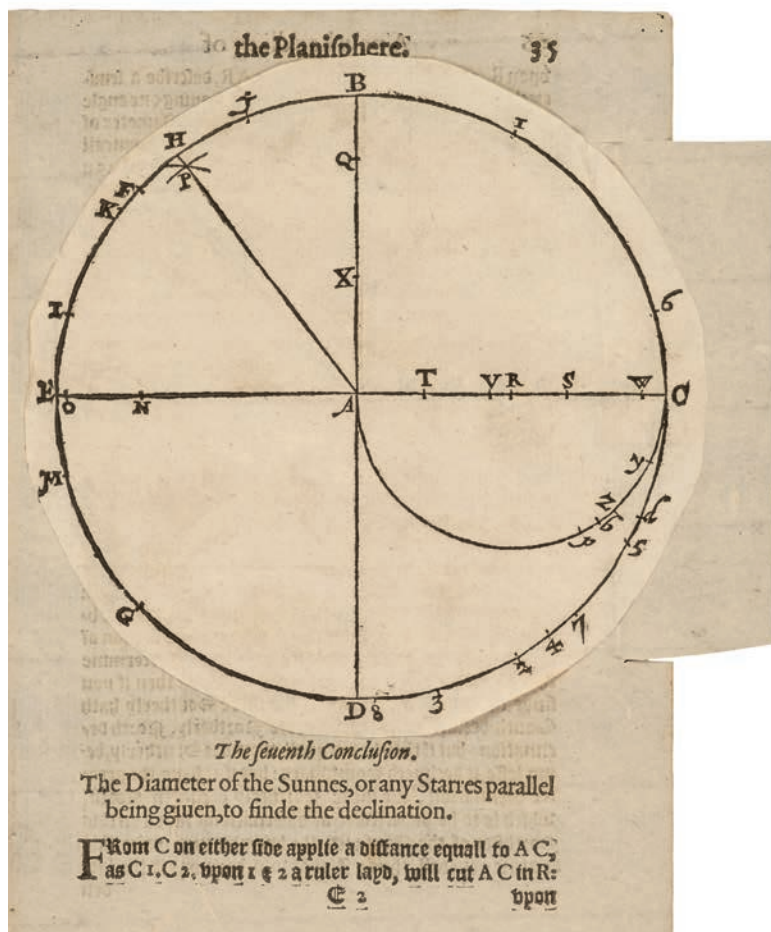

Hood (Thomas, bap. 1556-1620). The Use of the Two Mathematicall Instrumentes, the Crosse Staffe, (differing from that in common use with the Mariners:) And the Iacobes Staffe: Set forth Diologue wyse in two briefe and playne treatises: the one most commodious for the mariner, and all such as are to deale in astronomical matters: the other, profitable for the surveyor, to take the length, heighth, depth, or breadth, of any thyng measurable, 2 parts, 1st edition, Tobie Cooke & Robert Dexter, 1590, [22] leaves, part 2 bound before part 1, both titles with woodcut device and within woodcut border, second part title torn with loss to upper right corner, folding plate (inverted) at rear, final blank (C2) present at end of first part, running heads shaved Signatures: A2 B4 C2; A2 B-D4, folding plate (inverted).

ESTC S116550; STC 13699; Taylor, Mathematical Practitioners 179 & 330.

The very rare first edition of Hood's work explaining the use of two instruments for the taking of latitude (ESTC locates just four copies, apparently all lacking signature A to the first part (title-page and dedication leaf), inferring this signature from STC).

'This was one of two books on the use of instruments which mathematician and physician Thomas Hood had designed, the other being The Making and Use of the Geometrical Instrument called a Sector (1598)' (ODNB).

Oliver (Thomas, died 1610?), A New Handling of the Planisphere, Divided into Three Sections. In the first is a plaine and sensible explication of the circles of the Sphere, and such termes as appertaine vnto the doctrine de primo mobili ... The second sheweth how upon any plaine ... hauing one circle diuided into degrees ... most Conclusions of the Astrolabe may for all Latitudes or Countries be readily and exactly performed onely vwith Ruler and Compasses. In the third ... is contained the making of certaine easie instruments ... Invented for the most part, and first published in English by Thomas Olyver, 1st edition, Felix Kyngston for Simon Waterson and Rafe Iacson, 1601, 79, 82-[100] pp., cancel illustration from blank N2 placed at p. 35, black letter, woodcut diagrams to text, lacks final blank (N2) which had a cancel illustration but here excised and tipped onto the cancelled illustration on page 35, eight leaves neatly trimmed and folded at foremargins (D3, E2, F1, H1, H3, I1, K2, N1), two old laid paper endpapers at rear

Signatures: A-M4 N1 [-N2, blank with cancel diagram, here excised and tipped onto cancelled illustration on p. 35].

ESTC S113509; STC 18810; Taylor, Mathematical Practitioners 177-78.

'Oliver showed his extensive mathematical knowledge in a work on astronomy which he published in 1601. This was entitled A New Handling of the Planisphere and was intended as a means for solving astronomical problems by the use of ruler and compass, thus obviating the need for expensive instruments. The instrument of the title was simply a circular piece of brass with circular scales for degrees, the zodiac, and the hours of the day, and fitted with sights and a plummet. It could be used for various astronomical observations and was obviously designed as an alternative to the astrolabe. The book includes a clear exposition of cosmography but the use of the instrument is rather more convoluted, involving a great many geometrical constructions. In the preface Oliver acknowledged his debt to Christopher Clavius for his writing on the astrolabe' (ODNB).

Very rare, the last copy appearing at auction as part of a scientific sammelband at Sotheby's in 2004.

He was born in West Ham in 14694, and educated by local clergymen, and placed in business with a Mr Dod in Fenchurch street, where the library of Dr. Nicholas was kept, the contents of which became the young Edwards daily reading matter. Instead of going into business, he traveled widely on the continent and following which he made a living from sketches of animals. Taken up by James Theobald, F.R.S., he was introduced to Sir Hans Sloane. Between 1743 and 1751, he published A Natural History of Uncommon Birds in four volumes, with three subsequent volumes entitled Gleanings of Natural History issued between 1758-1764, the etchings for which were all made by the author. He was elected a member of the Royal Society in 1757.

Provenance: ownership inscription of Narcissus Luttrell (1657-1732), noted annalist, politician and bibliophile, dated 1681 to front endpapers of volumes I & II. Luttrell was twice member of parliament for different Cornwall seats (1679-1680 and 1691-1695), during which time he kept an important parliamentary diary, while his chronicle of contemporary events was used by Macaulay for his History of England and in 1857 published as A Brief Historical Relation of State Affairs from September 1678 to April 1714. He also formed one of the most impressive private libraries of his time, which was especially strong in poetry and Elizabethan literature; usefully for book historians he often annotated his books with the price he had paid for them. After his death the library was eventually sold by Leigh and Sotheby in a twelve-day sale commencing on 6 March 1786, while his manuscripts were bequeathed to All Souls, Oxford. Many of his books were acquired by the great collectors James Bindley and Richard Heber, who subsequently loaned a number of them to Sir Walter Scott for his edition of Dryden, which appeared in 1808, Scott remarking in his preface that 'the industrious collector seems to have bought every poetical tract, of whatever merit, which was hawked through the streets in his time, marking carefully the price and date of the purchase. His collection contains the earliest editions of many of our most excellent poems, bound up, according to the order of time, with the lowest trash of Grub Street'.

136 [Pitcairn, Archibald, 1652-1713]. The Assemblie or Scotch Reformation. A Comedie. The Third Edition Corrected and Enlarged by the Authors, 1691 [but later, circa 1720], contemporary manuscript in a neat, fair hand, 80 unnumbered leaves, contemporary plain calf, remains of small paper label at head of spine, upper cover detached, small 4to (155 x 125mm), together with a printed edition of the same work, Edinburgh; [no publisher or printer], 1766, xiii, [3], 76, [2] pages, some spotting and dust soiling, old inscriptions to title, title neatly relined, long closed tear repairs to final three leaves without loss of text, lacks final (?) blank, 19th-century half morocco over marbled boards, heavily rubbed, 12mo

This satirical play, attributed to Pitcairn, is significant as the only known full-length drama written in Scotland between the Reformation and the eighteenth century. A biting attack on religious hypocrisy it is believed to have been written in 1692, then first published in 1722. It was not until the third edition of 1817 that the author's name appeared on the title-page. The manuscript here is written in an early 18th century hand, perhaps contemporary with the first printing. The date indicates that perhaps it was written in 1691 and the claim of 'third edition' on the title-page may suggest the existence of multiple pre-publication manuscript editions being in circulation. There were two Edinburgh printings in 1766, the copy here being the same as ESTC T132646.

Jean-Dominique Cassini IV (1748-1845) was the fourth generation of the Cassini family to engage in important astronomical work as director of the Paris Observatory, his great-grandfather being Giovanni Domenico Cassini (or Jean Dominique after he was granted French citizenship, 1625-1712), who discovered four of Jupiter's moons, and correctly identified the rings of Saturn as divided into two parts (the 'Cassini Division'). Cassini IV, as the younger Cassini is known, set up a perpetual course of observations at the Royal Observatory in Paris, with the assistance of three students (Jacques Perny de Villeneuve, Nicolas-Antoine Nouet and Alexandre Ruelle) who worked under his direction from 1785, taking turns continuously day and night; their observations were drawn up, calculated and published each year in the form of a report inserted in the Memoires de l'Academie Royale des Sciences. 100 separately-issued copies of each extract were distributed to fellow astronomers across Europe (this copy presumably one of these). See Charles Wolf, Histoire de l'Observatoire de Paris de sa fondation à 1793, Paris, 1902, pp. 265-269).

He died at his grandmother's house in Newfoundland St. Bristol to which place his mother had carried his for better med[ical] advice. Hartley and a servant were with her, after a short time they went to Westbury on a visit to Mr & Mrs Southey. 195* Davies (Peter Maxwell, 1934–2016). English composer and conductor, Master of the Queen's Music 2004 to 2014. A significant archive comprising approximately 120 individual items of autograph manuscripts including music manuscripts, autographs letters and postcards, annotated scores and miscellaneous autographs, c. 1952–2000, most notably including very early and significant Autograph Musical Manuscripts of Fünf Gedichte von Christian Morgenstern, 1952; the carol Ave Maria, Blessed Flower, c. 1961; 3 postcards with musical quotations including 1 titled Tabula prima; 54 autograph letters signed, 30 autograph postcards signed, published scores of his own and other composers' works, some with Davies' signature and annotations, further miscellaneous autograph items and other ephemera including biographical important photocopies of unpublished material by Maxwell Davies, etc.

Provenance: Roderic Dunnett, a writer and close friend of the composer who has written widely on music including modern British opera.

The collection comprises:

Autograph Musical Manuscript of Fünf Gedichte von Christian Morgenstern signed at the end of the score ('Peter Maxwell Davies / September 1952 / Fünf Gedichte von Christian / Morgenstern'), 6 pages, folio., covers detached and page edges creased. An astonishing score from the 18 year old composer, who is writing in a chromatic, but tonal musical language.

An extremely rare, early and significant work.

Autograph Musical Manuscript of the Carol Ave Maria, Blessed Flower signed ('Max' and 'Peter Maxwell Davies'), 1 page, large quarto (small tear and two file holes, neither affecting the music or text, however the 'vies' of Davies has been removed by one of them). Being 18 long bars for mixed choir laid out on two staves, with an autograph note about the Carol, which was written in 1961 for Cirencester Grammar School Choir where Davies taught music. In the autograph note, Davies also refers to the note values he has used in this manuscript, saying, '... I think I eventually wrote it out in half-time values...'. This is borne out by the published version of this important manuscript.

Autograph Musical Manuscript entitled Tabula prima unsigned, 1 page, written in blue biro on a postcard and laid out along each side of the postcard (two file holes not affecting the manuscript but just touching the corner of the musical stave). A note on the verso, signed with initials ('PMD') indicates that the work is "... A tiny canon, with the title borrowed from the illustration which set off the Vesalius work, on a cantus from it".

Autograph Postcard Signed ('Max') with a short autograph musical quotation of 1 bar, sending greetings from Brazil and informing the recipient that the seminars he is teaching at the university are "...interesting and worth it..." but lamenting the humidity and asking for news. 1 page (with the usual stamps and postal cancellations, one touching but not obscuring, part of the text and musical quotation). The bar is a melody based on a rumba.

Autograph Postcard signed ('Max') with an unidentified autograph musical quotation, 2 bars for piano written on a hand drawn stave, 1 page, Dorset, 1973. Enquiring when he can see the recipient, and suggesting dates.

28 Autograph Letters Signed ('M' or Max'), 57 pages (various sizes) Many of the letters are of the utmost biographical importance and are astonishing for their levels of candour.

The following four quotes come from only 1 letter (written oddly, over 9 pages but without using the complete page - thus taking on the form of a litany of confessional thoughts):

"... Last year I wrote Mad Songs, finished 'St. Thomas Wake', an orchestral commission for Dortmund, wrote 'Solita' for flute and 'Canda Pavonis' + Sub team protectionem' for piano, the Pavans (Foxtrots) on Purcell, + Vesalii Icones. Too much, never again. It'll take weeks to recover. Still..."

"...As a child, I always hated myself, particularly my body & my funny-shaped head which wasn't like other people's...A continuation of this paragraph would be too painful..."

With uncanny prescience, (in 2007, £450,000 was embezzled from him by one of MaxOpus's Directors), Davies informs his recipient that:

"...I am going to be in very nasty financial trouble. But this is boring..."

Maxwell Davies then goes into explicit sexual and anatomical detail relating to specific areas of his lower torso and then rather tangentially refers to his piece Revelation and Fall, written in 1966:

"...I am glad you got the Rev and Fall record - I'm still pleased with that. It's

I think one of my intensest pieces - much more weighty than 8 Songs for a mad King..."

Many of the other letters discuss or mention his own works or continue in confessional tones, in particular with regards to the awful trauma that faced all gay men growing up before 1967:

"...A few facts, which is only fair, as I think I perceived a lot about you! - I remember at the age of 14 realising that my whole attitude to people - the person I loved most - the person I loved was contrary to the law. There was no-one to discuss such things with - my parents wouldn't know what I was talking about...and in a northern grammar school full of mine and cotton workers' sons such things are jokes only, fit for a laugh... which meant that after the first shock, when I locked myself in the public loo of the cemetery for 3 days deciding whether to go on or not, I realised I was not alone..."

A further letter discusses a project for a new work based on Lancelot and the Grail, extracted from the 1972 book 'The Grail Legend' by Emma Freud and Marie-Louise von Franz, which the composer asks to be translated into Latin:

"...I'd like to start the orch[estral] piece with a setting of an adaptation latinised of the Grail extract overleaf, as an introduction to four splendid movements, the first 3 entirely orchestral and the fourth containing a setting of the poem already made..."

[There appears to be no reference to this proposed work in the PMD Catalogue of Works]

13 Autograph Letters signed ('Max' and 'M'), 22 pages 4to, 8vo and varying sizes (2 on 'The Fires of London' headed paper and 1 on the reverse of 'The Fires of London' concert advertising the first performance of Hymn to St Magnus), (file holes affecting 4 letters with very little loss of text, general creasing and paper loss to 2 letters with minor loss to text), Orkney, London, 1971 to 1977. One postcard sends Christmas greetings in the form of a handwritten bar of music with a rest and pause above it.

11 Autograph Postcards Signed, 1969-1992, some to his most important works, with others discussing his personal philosophies and interests, his personal thoughts and feelings and his ongoing relationship with the recipient.

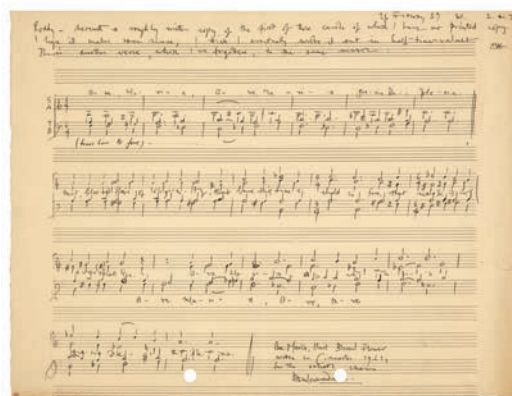

Remarkable 7 page document written in pencil by PMD, being the notes for a lecture on Sonata Form, mentioning most composers who wrote using that structure, as well as drawing parallels to architecture and other extra-musical disciplines. A fascinating insight into PMD's pedagogy, having begun his career as a teacher at Cirencester Grammar School.

205* Henry VIII (1491–1547). King of England and Ireland, 1509–1547. A fine early Document Signed, 'Henry R', as King of England, at the manor of Greenwich, 30 June 'thyrd year of our reign' [1511], manuscript document on vellum, being a warrant under the Royal sign manual and signet, to Andrew Windsor ['Wyndesore'], keeper of the great wardrobe, 'to deliver two dozen lyams [leashes] and collars for hounds, six chains to tie hounds and 40 ells [in England one ell would have been 45 ins [or 1.143 m] of canvas to cover a cart for carriage of the king's hounds, to Thomas Carmynow, gentleman usher of the king's chamber, William Rolt, yeoman of the chamber, or the bearer of the warrant', traces of the king's signet can be seen at the foot, 1 page, slightly irregular shape, approximately 102 x 255mm

Andrew Windsor (c.1467–1543) of Stanwell, Middlesex, succeeded to the office of Keeper of the Great Wardrobe in 1506, during the reign of Henry VII, retaining that position under Henry VIII, until his death. For a good account of Windsor see History of Parliament Online:

'... As keeper of the wardrobe [Windsor] was concerned with all the ceremonies of state, at several of which his attendance is recorded. He witnessed the marriage of Princess Mary to Louis XII in 1514, signed the peace and marriage treaties with France in 1518, and two years later accompanied the King to the Field of Cloth of Gold. On 1 Sept. 1524 he was at Blackheath to greet the papal envoy, who was bearing Henry VIII the gift of a sacred rose.'

'Thomas Carminow was of Respryn in Cornwall and the Middle Temple. He married Elizabeth Cheesman; two of their sons, John and Nicholas, sat as MPs for Cornish constituencies. He was already gentleman usher of the privy chamber by 1509 (Letters and Papers 182). Thomas made his will on 16 February 1528, requesting burial in the Greyfriars church at Bodmin before the altar of John Carminow, and bequeathed all his tinworks in Cornwall to his wife. He died between 12 June 1528, when he wrote a codicil to his will, and 15 May 1529 when it was proved.' [TNA PROB 11/23/53].

'William Rolte was appointed to the next vacancy as a sergeant-at-arms in November 1511 'in consideration of the daily service done unto us' [TNA E101/417/7 m128]. IN 1521 he was a ranger of Waltham Forest, bailiff of Topsham and Cullompton in Devon and keeper of the park of Cullompton; to trace, but can probably be identified with the individual of that name, referred to as a serjeant-at-arms, who received crown grants of the Essex manors of Chigwell and Westhatch in 1537 and 1538. His will of 19 September 1541, in which he describes himself as of Chigwell, 'serjeant-at-arms unto our said sovereign lord [the king]', was proved on 10 November 1541.' [TNA PROB 11/28/286].

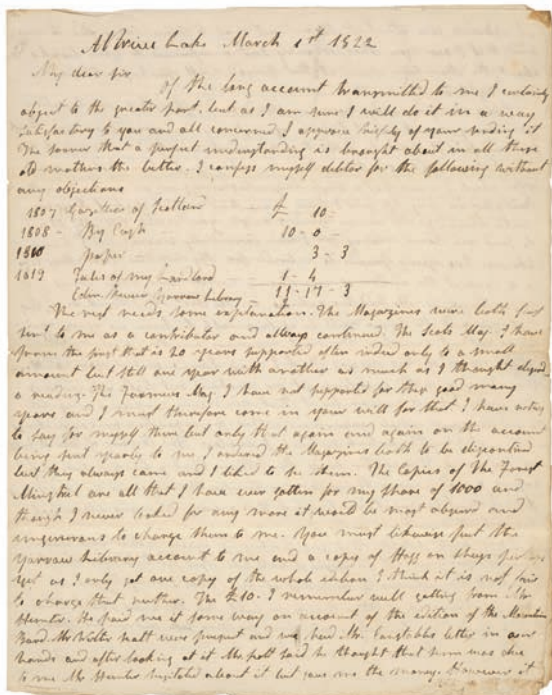

A group entry for Henry VIII's privy chamber is to be found in ODNB, and begins:

'Henry VIII, privy chamber of (act. 1509–1547), body of personal servants to the king, was an institution whose importance has only recently been fully appreciated. Developments at the royal court from the mid-fifteenth century put in place new living arrangements for the king—a private suite known (from its most important room) as 'the privy chamber'. In turn this led by the end of the first decade of the reign of Henry VIII to the appearance of a new category of gentle-born courtiers who alone attended the sovereign there and provided the social milieu in which he spent much of his time when away from the public eye. The benefits of belonging to the privy chamber circle meant that there was a constant pressure for growth in numbers; the ten of 1526 had more than doubled by the time of the king's death on 28 January 1547.'

Henry VIII kept lots of animals including canaries, nightingales and ferrets, but his 'favourite pets were his dogs, especially beagles, spaniels and greyhounds; the latter were considered a particularly noble breed. Over the years the King sent hundreds of such dogs, all 'garnished with a good iron collar', as gifts to the Emperor and the King of France. Henry's own dogs wore decorative collars of velvet – only permitted to royal dogs – and kid, with or without torettes (spikes) of silver and gold; some were adorned with pearls all the King's arms and his portcullis and rose badges; his dogs coats' were of white silk, and they had their fur regularly rubbed down with 'hair cloth'. Sixty-five dog leashes were found in Henry's closet after his death. Pets dogs were fed bread, not meat, to discourage them from developing hunting instincts. Two of Henry's dogs, Cut and Ball, were prone to getting lost, and he paid out the huge sum of nearly 15s. (about £225 today) in rewards to those who brought them back.' 206* Hogg (James, 'the Ettrick Shepherd', 1770-1835). Scottish poet, novelist and essayist. Autograph Letter Signed, 'James Hogg', Altrive Lake, 1 March 1822, to the publisher Robert Cadell, concerning his financial affairs with the publisher and taking issue with certain aspects of the account and the money he owes. 'Of the long account transmitted to me I certainly object to the greater part, but as I am sure I will do it in a way satisfactory to you and all concerned I approve highly of your finding it to the favour that a perfect understanding is brought about in all these old matters the better. I confess myself debtor for the following without any objections', then listing items including Gazetteer of Scotland, cash, paper, Tales of my Landlord, before continuing 'The rest needs some explanation. The magazines were both just sent to me as a contributor and always continued. The Scots Mag. I have from the first 20 years supported often indeed only to a small amount but still one year with another as much as I thought... ', continuing in a similar vein '... The £10 I remember well getting from Mr Hunter. He paid me it some way on account of the edition of the Mountain Bard. Mr Walter Scott was present and we had Mr Constable's letter in our hands and after looking at it Mr Scott said that he thought that some was due to me. Mr Hunter hesitated about it but gave me the money. However it strikes me that it turned out not to have been due to me and that I owe you that money... ', suggesting they meet face to face to resolve the matters, asking whether they might employ his nephew Robert Hogg 'who is to correct the edition of my poems', referring to an article enclosed [no longer present] that is not his but written by Mr William Clark, 'a teacher here who copies a good many things for me', referring to his own work, 'I am quite delighted that my poetry is again fallen into your hands. You need not be afraid: it will sell. But I believe you must put all the volumes to the press at once that I may know in time what each of them wants in bulk', signed at the foot of page 2 and with an added note at the head of page 3, also signed, saying 'I send you along with this the first series of the Advices to Reviewers [no longer present]. If published you must not tell anyone who is the writer except Mr Jeffery [editor of the Edinburgh Review] should he ask you may tell him frankly as I am not in the least afraid of his taking any offence. No man will ever suspect me on account of the numerous [?]topical quotations and allusions. I anticipate some excellent sport with it but I could not get on without addressing Mr Jeffery first as being the head of the set but I have taken care to make it all most complete and absolute nonsense that was ever written. I know many will puzzle themselves to find out what can be the meaning of some parts of it but I'll defy them for in that fact they have no meaning whatever', seal tear with blank paper loss, 4to

This letter is published in The Collected Letters of James Hogg, volume 2, 1820-1831, edited by Gillian Hughes (2006).

A new and revised edition of The Mountain Bard appeared in 1821 and a 4-volume edition of Poetical Works was published in 1822, as well as his 3-volume novel The Three Perils of Man. However, these were not easy times financially for Hogg which were exasperated by a relative of his wife's mother absconding to America and saddling the family with his debts.

215* Milstein (Nathan, 1903–1992). Russian-American violinist. A rare and important Autograph Music Manuscript (unsigned), written in pen and pencil, being a working copy of Milstein's cadenza for the 3rd movement of Beethoven's Violin Concerto with upwards of 55 bars, headed in Milstein's hand 'Cadenza to the 3rd Movement of Beethoven's, St Louis, Jan[uary] 15 1961', some marks and creases to upper outer corners, 2 pages (opening out to form a large double sheet), 310 x 480mm

A transcriber and composer, Milstein arranged many works for violin and wrote his own cadenzas for concertos, including Beethoven's only work in that genre. Milstein was renowned for his fastidious approach to violin playing; he was apparently obsessed with articulating each note perfectly and would often spend long periods of time working out fingerings which would make passages sound more articulated.

The payment pre-dates the great financial crisis of Scott's life, caused by the failure in 1826 of various publishers, including Ballantyne's, who together lost more than £126,000, 'Of [which] £20,000 was Scott's private debt. Some £15,000 consisted of bills drawn by Scott and accepted by James Ballantyne & Co.' (ODNB). The present note exemplifies the reversed position in 1815.

225* Shaw (George Bernard, 1856-1950). Irish Playwright, Nobel Prize winner for Literature, 1925. Autograph Notecard Initialed, 'G.B.S.', Ayot St Lawrence, Welwyn, Hertfordshire, 15 January 1930, to F.H. Sunderland, in full: 'I daresay it is pretty bad. This method of civilizing hillmen has been practised vigorously as long as I can remember: "primitive expeditions" is the official term. Nobody, as far as I am aware, has ever taken the smallest notice of my allusions to them. If missionary work is left to British officers, what are they to do, except their job, which is shooting?', on printed personal stationery notecard, address to verso in Shaw's hand, stamped and postmarked, 115 x 90mm

The recipient of this intriguing and typically pithy message was the British genealogist Frederick Harold Sunderland (died 1954) of Howden, Yorkshire. Clearly it is a response to Sunderland who was seemingly soliciting Shaw's thoughts about missionary work.

227 Symonds (John Addington, 1840-1893). Poet, author and literary critic. The Sonnets of Michael Angelo Buonarroti and Tommaso Campanella, 1st edition, 1878, signed and inscribed by the author on Works by the Author page at front, 'For Dr. Carl Ruedi / from his obedient patient / John Addington Symonds / Jan. 15 1877 [but 1878?]', some spotting and two name ink stamps of the recipient to that page and half-title leaf following, upper inner hinges cracked, original cloth gilt, rubbed, some fraying at head and foot of spine, 8vo, together with an Autograph Letter Unsigned to [Charles Kain] Jackson about Michelangelo, Edward Cracroft Lefroy, The Artist magazine and Antinous, 2 pages, 8vo
A scarce presentation copy to Symonds' doctor in Davos, Switzerland. Symonds' later book, Life of Michaelangelo Buonarroti was eventually published in 1893, and his introduction to 'E. C. Lefroy' posthumously in 1897. This introduction originally appeared in the New Review for March 1892 and subsequently with some additions in In the Key of Blue in 1893. Charles Kains Jackson (1857-1933). Lawyer and Editor of the Artist Magazine and late correspondent of J. A. Symonds.

(2) £150 - £200

229* Tosti (Francesco Paolo, 1846-1916). Italian composer. Autograph manuscript signed twice, 'F. Paolo Tosti', circa 1890s, being his own arrangement for piano of his song Suzon (1892), signed to the title-page and at the top of the first page of music, manuscript title (embossed stamp for 12 Mandeville Place, W., at head) and 2 pages of music on printed staves, folio
Provenance: Christie's auction (22 May 1998, lot 208). This manuscript was found amongst the music of Princess Victoria (1865-1935), fourth child and second daughter of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra. It is logical to assume that Tosti arranged Suzon for solo piano for Princess Victoria to play (where the vocal line is not doubled in the piano part, Tosti has included those notes in his piano arrangement which suggests it is not an alternative accompaniment). However, as Tosti taught singing to some of the royal children it is also possible that he adapted it for himself to play whilst accompanying one of them.

230* Walsingham (Thomas, 1561-1630). Courtier to Queen Elizabeth I and literary patron to Christopher Marlowe. An extremely rare autograph signature, 'Tho: Walsingham', at the foot of an Autograph Letter by Sir John Scott, Kent, 28 July 1608, being a Kentish Muster addressed to Sir William Twysden (1566-1639), requiring Twysden to have his company in full effect, that it '...may be fitt to appeare before the muster maister at Cockesheath, uppon the fivetenth day of October, by eight of the clock in the morning...', the text almost certainly in the hand of Sir John Scott, signed by Scott, Walsingham and John Levyt, some spotting and dust-soiling, small seal tear to lower blank not affecting text, 1 page with integral address panel and remnant of a small seal, folio, laid open and flat on card with printed caption at foot, overall 305 x 400mm, framed and glazed

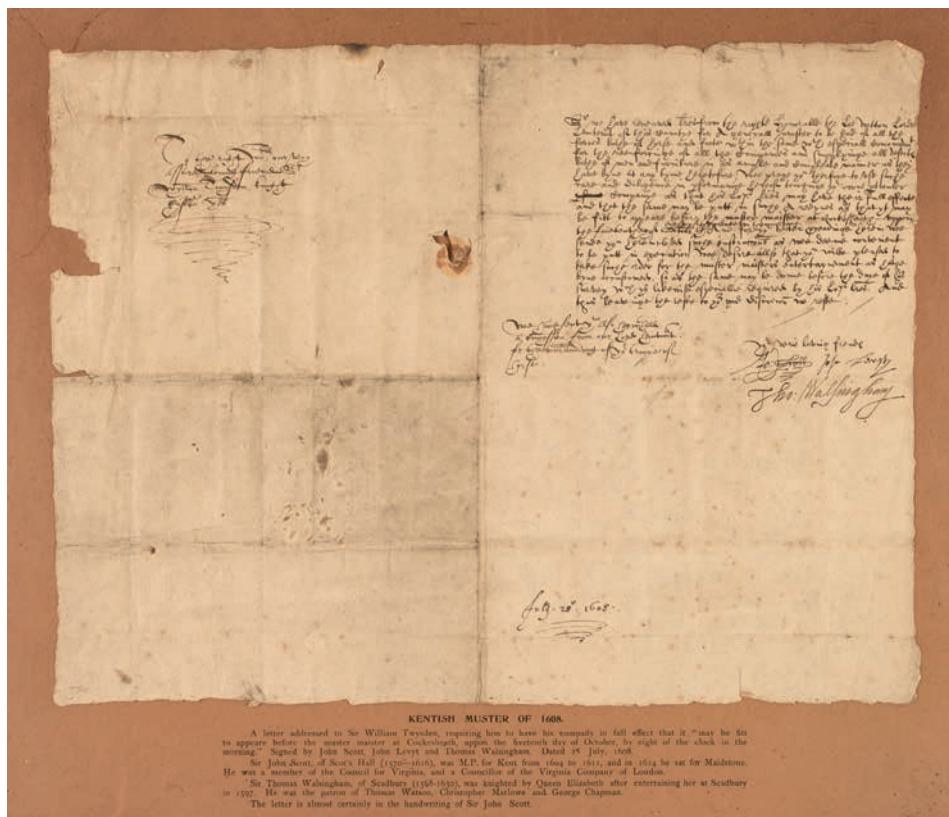

Sir Thomas Walsingham is best remembered as being the literary patron to Christopher Marlowe. He was related to Elizabeth's spymaster Sir Francis Walsingham (first cousin once removed) and was the employer of Marlowe's murderer Ingram Frizer. This connection is one of the reasons offered for suggesting that Marlowe's death may have been linked with intelligence work and not a dispute over a bill for food and accommodation, as in the coroner's verdict.

The first poet to seek Walsingham's patronage was Thomas Watson, an old acquaintance from the time when both men had been engaged on Sir Francis Walsingham's secret business in France. His timely dedication to Thomas Walsingham, newly come into money through his inheritance, prefaced A Lament for Meliboeus, an elegy on the death of Sir Francis. Watson's venture was based on the family relationship between the dedicatee and the dead statesman, but Thomas Walsingham proved to be a genuine patron of literary endeavour and other poets followed the example. It is probable that Watson introduced Marlowe, a friend from the London literary circle, (with whom he was arrested for brawling in September 1589), to Thomas Walsingham; although their paths may have crossed earlier, during Marlowe's own service to the late Sir Francis. Walsingham appreciated the dedication, and the introduction, with Marlowe becoming a frequent house-guest at Walsingham's home in Scadbury, Chislehurst, Kent. It has been further suggested that there may have been intimacy between the two men. Walsingham was a mourner at Marlowe's funeral.

Sir John Scott (c.1564-1616) of Scot's Hall and of Nettlestead Place in Kent, was an English soldier, Member of Parliament and an early investor in the Colony of Virginia. In 1601, Scott was implicated in The Earl of Essex's Rebellion but succeeded in clearing himself and in the same year was a parliamentary candidate for Kent. He was unsuccessful on this first attempt, but was elected its MP in the Parliament of 1604 and for Maidstone in the Added Parliament of 1614. He became a member of the Council for Virginia in 1607, the year when that colony was re-established and was a councillor of the Virginia Company of London in 1609. He died in 1616 and was buried at Brabourne in Kent.

232* Wesley (John, 1703–1791). Church of England clergyman and a founder of Methodism. Autograph Letter Signed, 'JWesley', Dublin, 11 April 1789, to 'Dear Brother' [Lancelot Harrison, identified at the head in another contemporary hand], in full: 'The letter which I received two or three days ago from George Whitfield informs me, that I outran my income so far last year, as to be now above two hundred pounds in debt. I have therefore promised him, not to draw upon him any more, before the end of next month. But do not you remember the Rule in the Minutes of the Conference, That we are not to [be]gin the building of any Preaching house, before two thirds of the money is subscribed? This rule we may not dispense with. And I am afraid, this is not the case, with regard to the House you are speaking of at Lincoln. I doubt therefore whether the time be come, for your building there. But you have reason to rejoice, that the Work of God prospers, there as well as at poor Blighton [Blyton]. I am, with kind Love to S. Harrison, Your Affectionate Friend & Brother, JWesley', some age wear and slight soiling, tear with small loss of first two letters of '[be]gin' to left margin of centre fold, 1 page, 8vo

Provenance: The letter was recently discovered inside a dilapidated Wesleyan Hymnal (1877), with contemporary ownership inscription of Sarah Abel, along with a torn envelope marked 'John Wesley's letter' in a Victorian hand, with ink stamp to verso of 'E. Abel, Leather Merchant, St Helens', plus a Public Meeting leaflet held at Wesley Chapel, Corporation Street, St Helens, 11 October 1888. These items are included with the lot.

An interesting letter concerning financial difficulties, written in a deteriorating hand towards the end of Wesley's life, and probably referring to the building of the chapel at Lincoln St Benedict, licensed in 1789. The letter was published in Abraham Watmough, A History of Methodism in the Neighbourhood and City of Lincoln (1829), pp. 26–27. Watmough was shown the letter by Mrs Belton, who is also mentioned in connection with another Wesley letter on page 24, where she is described as 'Mrs Belton, of Walkeringham, daughter of Mr. [Lancelot] Harrison'.

'It does not appear, however, that Mr. Wesley's inability to advance the money, or his supposing the time was not come, prevented their proceeding; so that they had the pleasure of seeing the Chapel opened in the Spring of the following year ... On July the 1st, of the same year (1790), Mr. Wesley visited Lincoln for the last time. He preached in the new Chapel in the evening, to a crowded audience...' (Watmough, ibid., p. 27). Blyton was an early centre of Methodism in Lincolnshire and Lancelot Harrison was a Methodist Minister in the county. A Lancelot Harrison married a Susannah Moody at Haxey in Lincolnshire in 1769 (Ancestry). George Whitfield was a travelling preacher and the official printer for Wesley's book room known as the book steward. Both Harrison and Whitfield are referred to multiple times in Minutes of the Methodist Conferences: from the first, held in London by the late Rev. John Wesley, A.M., in the year 1744 (1862), where can also be found the origins of the subscription rule for the building of new chapels. In the minutes for a conference at Leeds in August 1766 is stated: 'Let no other building be undertaken till two-thirds of the money are subscribed' (p. 57).

233* Yeats (William Butler, 1865–1939). Irish poet. Early Autograph Letter Signed, 'W. B. Yeats', 3 Blenheim Road, Bedford Park, Chiswick, July 23/4 (the 4 written over the 3) 1894 (postmark), to Miss Allport, regretting having not written and thanking her for the work she has done and mentioning money, 1 page, 8vo

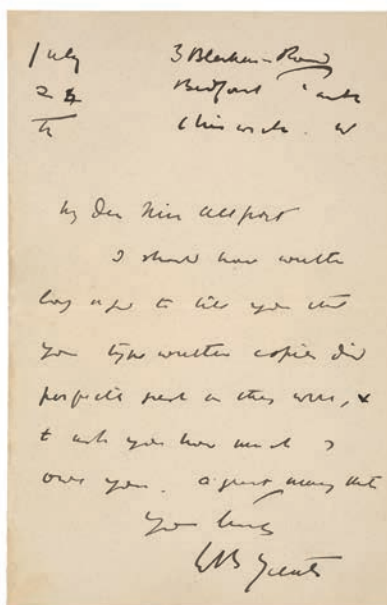

April 1894 saw the publication of Yeats's play The Land of Heart's Desire. It is, however, more likely that the 'typewritten copies' referred to, were of the second of two anthologies (also published in 1894) of the 'Rhymers' Club, a group of London-based poets who met regularly in Fleet Street to recite their verse; Yeats had founded the Club in 1890.

Miss Allport lived close to the Yeats family in 4 Marlborough Rd, Bedford Park and did typing on a part-time basis with Yeats frequently calling upon her services in the 1890s.

Apparently unpublished: not in The Letters, where there are two later letters to Miss Allport, relating to the same subject matter.

Carlyle', Chelsea, 17 September 1857, to [Reverend Charles] Kingsley, concerning an unidentified person, beginning, 'Fear nothing on that score. The poor blind "Propagandist" (as you fancy him) produced no change whatever in my notions about Sumner, whom I have known for a long time by eyesight of my own; - not about American matters in my department of them; which indeed, with their uncle-tommaries and Californian nuggets, with their angry crawlings, semi-delirious speculations, and general tumult as of a weir about to burst, seem to me a thoroughly sordid object on the great scale, and do not interest or occupy my thoughts at all in late times. In fact the poor man did not do me any mischief whatever, - except perhaps stealing away in all, some six hours of the last remainder of my time; for who however, in return, he offered me the pleasant spectacle of a human soul happy and content under very scanty conditions. There is a small vein of excellent geniality in the man; - a noticeable resemblance to Leigh Hunt in him, which, encased such an element of alluvial Methodism, and general yo Yankee-doodle-do-ism much amused me by the contrasts and similarities', continuing in the same vein and then dwelling on his own sense of mortality, '... 237* Darwin (Charles Robert, 1809–1882). Letter signed, 'Ch. Darwin', Down, Bromley, Kent, S.E., 15 July [1866], to [Charles] Kingsley, written in the hand of Darwin's wife Emma, thanking Kingsley for telling him where his lectures are published as 'living in the country I might not have heard of their publication', and that based on an abstract he saw in a newspaper he expects the lectures to much interest him, the rest of the letter being on the subject of the migrating eye in flatfish, 'I can form no opinion about the wonderful case of the migration of the eye in flat-fish; whether Steenstrup is right who seems to think that the eye itself moves by absorption on one side and growth on the other; or whether Thompson [sic] is right who thinks that the eye itself does not move, but thinks that the adjoining parts are developed in a wonderfully unequal manner on the two sides of the head. The power of development on either side seems to me one of the most curious points of the case. When I read the paper I speculated how the unequal development [coul]d have originated, and imagined that a fish feeding on the ground with its body held laterally might be benefited by the eye on the lower side becoming deeper and deeper imbedded in the skull, and instead of becoming blind and useless, travelling to the upper side, but this is all baseless speculation', light creasing and one short split at upper margins, old tape adhesion marks at head and foot of first page (with some see-through) not affecting text, boldly signed 'Ch. Darwin' at foot of final page, 4 pages, 8vo

Provenance: By family descent from the estate of Lady Mary Colyer-Fergusson (1871–1964) of Ightham Mote, Kent; and gifted to her by Mary Harrison in 1930. Mary Harrison (1852–1931), novelist and daughter of Charles Kingsley. Charles Kingsley (1819–1875) novelist, Church of England clergyman, social reformer and science populariser.

An important, unpublished letter concerning the evolutionary problem of the migration of the eye in flatfish. It was written in response to the Rev. Kingsley's letter (12 July 1866), referring to the article by Charles Wyville Thomson, 'Notes on Prof. Steenstrup's views on the obliquity of flounders', published in the Annals and Magazine of Natural History for May 1865, in which Thomson gave an abstract, with commentary, of a paper by Japetus Steenstrup on the migration of the eye of flounders.

Kingsley's letter is published in The Correspondence of Charles Darwin, vol. 14 and at The Darwin Correspondence Project (DCP-LETT-5154), where it is noted that it was acquired from [Kingsley's daughter] Mary Harrison in 1930 (as the letter offered here). 'The DCP do not have knowledge of Darwin's reply yet. The DCP do not have any letters from Darwin on the migration of eyes in flatfish'.

The two lectures delivered by Kingsley at the Royal Institution that he draws Darwin's attention to are 'Superstition' and 'Science', both published in Fraser's Magazine, vol. 73, June 1866, pp. 705–16 & vol. 74, July 1866, pp. 15–28.

Charles Darwin and Kingsley began to correspond soon after the publication of Origin of Species in 1859. Kingsley was a great science populariser and, arguably, as important as 'Darwin's bulldog' Thomas Huxley in promoting Darwin's ideas, in spite of his own theistic beliefs. Indeed, Kingsley was one of 90 men to whom Darwin had asked his publisher John Murray to send an advance copy of his work. Kingsley was quick to respond and told Darwin that from his familiarity with the breeding of domestic animals he was quite prepared to embrace its thesis of transmutation. He added that he found it 'just as noble a conception of Deity, to believe that he created primal forms capable of self development... as to believe that he required a fresh act of intervention to supply the lacunas wh[ic]h he himself had made. I question whether the former be not the loftier thought' (Kingsley, letter to Darwin, 18 November 1859; DCP-LETT-2534). Darwin went on to add an edited version of Kingsley's remarks to the second edition of his book published in 1860.

Flatfishes are born with one eye on each side of their head, but undergo metamorphosis where one eye migrates to the other side of the fish's head to produce asymmetrical juvenile fishes. By the time the skull ossifies fully the eyes are permanently fixed in place. Opponents of Darwin's theories insisted that this curious anatomy could not have evolved gradually through natural selection because there would be no apparent evolutionary advantage to a fish with a slightly asymmetrical skull but which retained eyes on opposite sides of the head. It was a problem Darwin puzzled over and one for which his critics took him to task.

One of Darwin's fiercest critics was the British zoologist St George Jackson Mivart who drew attention to the flatfish as a challenge to evolution by natural selection: '...if the transit [of the flatfish's eye] was gradual, then how such transit of one eye a minute fraction of the journey towards the other side of the head could benefit the individual is indeed far from clear. It seems, even, that such an incipient transformation must rather have been injurious.' Mivart, On the Genesis of Species, New York: D. Appleton, 1871, p. 50.

Darwin confronted Mivart's arguments in the sixth edition of Origin of Species, published the following year in 1872. 'But he [Mivart] might have found an answer to this objection in the excellent observations published in 1867 by Malm. The Pleuronectidae whilst very young and still symmetrical, with their eyes standing on opposite sides of the head, cannot long retain a vertical position, owing to the excessive depth of their bodies, the small size of their lateral fins, and to their being destitute of a swimbladder. Hence soon growing tired, they fall to the bottom on one side. Whilst thus at rest they often twist, as Malm observed, the lower eye upwards, to see above them; and they do this so vigorously that the eye is pressed hard against the upper part of the orbit. The forehead between the eyes consequently becomes, as could be plainly seen, temporarily contracted in breadth.' Darwin gives a Lamarckian explanation for the gradual transit of the eye. 'We thus see that the first stages of the transit of the eye from one side of the head to the other, which Mr. Mivart considers would be injurious, may be attributed to the habit, no doubt beneficial to the individual and to the species, of endeavouring to look upward with both eyes, while resting on one side at the bottom.' Darwin finally proposes his ideas based on natural selection that 'For all spontaneous variations in the right direction will thus be preserved; as will those individuals which inherit in the highest degree the effects of the increased and beneficial use of any part. How much to attribute in each particular case to the effects of use, and how much to natural selection, it seems impossible to decide.' Darwin, Origin of Species, 6th edition, John Murray, 1872, pp. 168–170.

What Darwin really needed to support his theory though were flatfish fossils with examples of the intermediate condition. It was not until 2008 that Matt Friedman, a graduate student in the Committee on Evolutionary Biology at the University of Chicago, drew attention to several examples of such transitional forms that he uncovered in museum collections of underwater fossilized creatures from Italy and France during the Eocene epoch, some 50 million years ago. Finally, here was Darwin's proof that flatfish did evolve from bilateral ancestors. See D. Cressey, The eyes have it, Nature (9 July 2008).

Why flatfish, 'the most asymmetrically-shaped vertebrate to ever live on earth', evolved thus and how their eyes and inner ears function compared to other fish are subjects of ongoing research by flatfish experts and enthusiasts such as Alexander Schreiber at the Laboratory of Vertebrate Metamorphosis, St. Lawrence University. ground with its body held laterally might be benefitted by the eye on the lower side becoming deeper & deeper imbedded in the skull, & instead of becoming blind & useless, traveling to the upper side, but this is all baseless speculation.

My dear Mr Kingsley

I am much obliged to you for telling me where your lectures are published as living in the country I might not have heard of their publication. I shall certainly read them & have not the least doubt they will interest me much, judging from an abstract which I saw in some newspaper.

I can form no opinion about the wonderful case of the migration of the eye in flat-fish; whether Steenstrup is right who seems to think that the eye itself moves by absorption on one side & growth on the other; or whether Thompson is right who thinks that the eye itself does not move, but that the adjoining parts are developed in a wonderfully unequal manner on the two sides of the head. The power of development on either side seems to me one of the most curious points of the case. When I read the paper I speculated how the unequal development had originated, & imagined that a fish feeding on the Provenance: Sara Ann Leifchild (1816-1892), poet and sister of the sculptor Henry. Given by her [?to Arthur Cohen] in 1888. Rt Hon. Arthur Cohen (1829-1914), barrister and diplomatic counsel. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson photographed the Rossetti family at their home in Cheyne Walk, London in October 1863 and stayed in contact with Christina Rossetti thereafter. She was evidently the recipient of a circular from her friend soliciting help for Dymes and his family. For as yet unknown reasons, other than perhaps unbounded generosity, Dodgson plunged himself into financial difficulties of his own as he gave financial assistance to a certain Thomas Jamieson Dymes whom he had met on holiday.

'To help people searching for work or advancement, Charles printed and sent out circulars. One concerned T.J. Dymes, classical scholar and schoolmaster, and his large family. After Charles learned in 1883 that they were poverty-stricken, he sent "about 180 copies of a letter (printed) about the Dymeses." Charles wrote about Dymes as "a friend of mine... in great distress" who had lost his post as under-master at a boys' school and sought employment for him and other members of the family. "Mr. Dymes has settled with his landlord for a payment of £219.7s....," Charles wrote Frederic Harrison, another friend of Dymes (October 4, 1883). "This sum I have lent him. Also I sent him some while ago £200 (which, though nominally a loan, was really meant to be a gift until he should be able, with perfect convenience to himself, to repay it): and for this debt of £419.7s... I am to have a Bill of Sale on his furniture, thus saving it from all risk of being seized by other creditors." Dymes must have found work and resolved his problems, and Charles later called on and dined with the Dymeses, then comfortably settled in London', Morton N. Cohen, Lewis Carroll: a Biography, (Macmillan, 1995), p. 310.

The 150th anniversary of his birth was celebrated on 12 November 2021.

Following the First Guangzhou uprising Sun went into exile and raised money for his revolutionary party and to support uprisings in China. While in London in October 1896 Sun was snatched from the street and detained for 12 days at the Chinese Legation, where the Chinese Imperial secret service planned to smuggle him back to China to execute him for his revolutionary actions. He was released through the efforts of the physician and pioneer of first aid James Cantlie, (Sun's former teacher at the Hong Kong College of Medicine for Chinese), who led a media campaign which not only succeeded in releasing Dr Sun, but also made him a hero in Britain. After he was released Sun stayed in London another eight months, spending much of his time voraciously reading at the British Library. By the time he left Britain in June 1897 he was a major revolutionary figure with clear ideas. The movement he inspired was to overthrow the Qing empire in 1911 and appoint Sun 'provisional president' of the Republic of China.

The paper used for the autographs would have been the personal stationery of Sir John Furley, CH, CB (1836-1919), an English humanitarian who worked to improve medical care both in wartime and at home. He was an active member of the Red Cross from its foundation, and one of the founders of St John Ambulance Association, set up to promote first aid training. While the connection between Sun and Cantlie is well documented, that between Sun and Furley is unknown. Coincidentally or not, Cantlie and Furley were co-authors/contributors to the St John Ambulance's oft-reprinted work First Aid to the Injured.

SAMUEL & EUNICE BAGSTER FAMILY ARCHIVE

The archive offered here comes by direct family descent from the family of the famous bible publisher Samuel Bagster (1772–1851) and his wife Eunice (1777–1877).

Samuel Bagster was born in London, on 26 December 1772, the second eldest of the five sons and two daughters of George Bagster (1739–1819), a businessman, and his wife, Mary, née Denton (1738–1823). Samuel commenced business as a general bookseller in the Strand in 1794 'and within an hour had sold a forty-five-volume set of Johnson's Poets'. On 19 December 1797 he married Eunice Birch whom he had met at a preaching rally. They had nine sons, including Samuel Bagster the younger, and three daughters, a total of six of whom survived infancy.

In 1816 Bagster published The English Version of the Polyglot Bible and, in 1817, Biblia sacra polyglotta Bagsteriana. Samuel (1800–1835), the eldest surviving son, worked with his father from 1815 before setting up a printing business in 1824. After the death of Samuel the elder in 1851, his son Jonathan (1813–1872) succeeded him as senior member of the firm.

Samuel Bagster, the elder, died at his home at Old Windsor, Berkshire, on 28 March 1851. His wife survived him by some twenty-six years, reaching the age of 100. The firm supplied bibles to King George IV, King William IV and Queen Victoria. The queen, also a widow after 1861, was well acquainted with Eunice from her many years living at Windsor. Royal clothing gifted by Victoria to Eunice was sold in these rooms on 11 May 2016.

In 1829 Corden executed an oil portrait of Mr Batchelor, one of King George IV's pages, as well as a portrait of Admiral Sir Edmund Nagle for the King, and in the 1830s the artist moved to Windsor. In 1838 he painted a watercolour of Queen Victoria on the East Terrace of Windsor Castle, and the Queen subsequently employed Corden to produce oil copies of many portraits in the Royal Collection. In 1844 he was commissioned to paint '7 pictures of the Duchesses, Princes and Princesses of Saxe-Coburg'; for this undertaking he travelled to Coburg with his son, William Corden the Younger (1819–1900), and was paid the then princely sum of £112 5s.

The mounting(?), the tracing of the Counties, and the embroidery round entirely done by herself". The inscription could be by Eunice's husband, Samuel Bagster, but it is perhaps more likely that it was by her eldest son, also named Samuel.'

Eunice Birch was born in St Giles, Middlesex, on 23rd August 1777, married Samuel Bagster on 19th December 1797 at St Giles in the Field, London, and died in Old Windsor, Berkshire, on 22nd August 1877 – the day before her 100th birthday. Another drawing with watercolour acquired by the NPG in the same lot at the Linnell Sale (Christie's, 15 March 1918, lot 82) was sold by the NPG Trustees to Sir John Lane. The family photographs in the following two lots all date from after Samuel's death in 1851 and therefore include no more images of him.

Then with a quivering sigh resign'd her breath,
 Her gentle spirit ever smil'd on death,
 Knight Mercury call'd it to Celestial Love,
 And Angels bore it to the Realm above!

To Lord B. on hopes of his Recovery after being dangerously wounded in a duel.

Since still the Vital Flame is left to burn
 And life's gay flattering prospects to return;
 Oh! may the house of Pain a helping power
 And Custom fatal Supplicio remove—
 Pain, that scales faint reason in her flight—
 Dispel her faint truth in all her dawning light—
 Repel proud Papiem—dear the blind Deity
 And leave to it its own proud dangerous creed
 Oh! may it check the wisdom of thy soul,
 Where will through the maw of Honor stole.

To a Nightingale. by Charlotte Smith—

Poor melancholy Bird, that wilt sing long
 Tell it to the morn, thy tale of tender wrong;
 Even what sad cause can such sweet notes flow,
 And whence this mournful melody of Song?
 My Poet's rousing fancy would translate
 What mean the sounds that swell thy little throat
 When still at day see thou leavest thy nest
 Thro' the hushing night to sing thy fate—
 Pale Sonnet's victims wert thou once among,
 Thou' now released in woodlands wild to roam,
 No had thou from friends some cruel wrong,
 Or didst thou martyr of divinations love?
 Ah! 'Sungstrop said' that such my lot might be
 To sigh & sing at liberty—like Thee!

Provenance: pencil inscription to front free endpaper, 'From the sale by Messrs Christie, June 6. 1939, in lot 3, at 5 Carlton House Terrace, S.W.1, The Earl of Caledon's house'.

Autograph commonplace book kept by Augusta Leigh (1783-1851), half-sister and alleged lover of Lord Byron, containing transcripts of hundreds of poems, extracts from novels and sermons, and other writings. Augusta appears to have started the book in 1802, a few months after the death of her grandmother Lady Holderness in 1801, 'the end of the only period of real security that Augusta would ever know' (Bakewell & Bakewell, Augusta Leigh, p. 49), and to have continued it until the autumn of 1821, when she visited her sister Mary, Countess of Chichester, at Stanmer Park (op. cit., p. 273). Lord Byron started a correspondence with Augusta in 1804, while he was still a student at Harrow. Contact dwindled after Augusta's marriage to Colonel George Leigh in 1807 but the pair rediscovered each other in 1813 and became intimate friends. Augusta copies poems by well-known figures such as Thomas Moore, Sir Brooke Boothby and Edward Young, as well as several women poets including Jane Bowdler, Charlotte Richardson Smith and Mary Julia Young. There are also frequent quotations from two novels:

Ann Radcliffe's Mysteries of Udolpho and Madame de Genlis's Les Mères Rivaies. In many cases Augusta appears to have had a personal connection with the author, such as her relative Isabella Howard, Countess of Carlisle, whose Thoughts in the Forms of Maxims Addressed to Young Ladies she reproduces at length; Isabella was a daughter of the fourth Baron Byron, and Augusta lived for a time at the Carlises' seat as a guest of Isabella's son Frederick (1748-1825), the fifth earl. When Augusta records extracts from longer works these are often the same sections found in contemporary magazines and anthologies, in particular Vicesimus Knox's extremely popular Elegant Extracts, first published in 1783: there is a perceptible bias in Augusta's collection to 18th-century authors.

412 British Isles. Desgranges (Christian name is unknown), La Carte des Royaumes, d'Angleterre, d'Ecosse et d'Irlande, dediée a sa Majesté Britannique..., Paris, 1689, separately published engraved map by Capitaine Roussel, contemporary outline colouring, inset maps of the English Channel and of the Shetland, Orkney and Faroe Islands, large uncoloured ornate cartouche and mileage scale, 455 x 570mm

R.W. Shirley. Printed Maps of the British Isles 1650 - 1750, Desgranges 1. state 1. Desgranges was a little known French mapmaker and no record exists of his Christian name, nor the dates of his birth or death. This map was separately published and Shirley notes at least six different states. This example matches Shirley's description of state 1 in that it has the signature of Roussel who engraved the map but it lacks that of Dolivart. This would appear to be an unrecorded variation of state 1. The date is significant. 1689 was the year that Louis XIV declared war on England in support of the deposed Catholic King James II. The three figures on the right of the cartouche represent James, his wife Mary and their infant son. The text beneath the inset map of the Faroe, Orkney and Shetland islands lists the English possessions in the Americas, the West Indies, Africa and Asia.

A rare map of the Kansai region of Japan, that shows the 33 Buddhist temples that a follower must visit to complete the pilgrimage. Pilgrims traditionally wore white robes and carried a walking stick. Traditionally completed on foot, it is today, more commonly achieved in a car or on trains. Pilgrims record their progress with a prayer book, which the temple staff mark with red stamps and Japanese calligraphy indicating the temple number, the temple name, and the specific name of the Kannon image. Some pilgrims receive the stamps on their white coats as well and these are then stored and used as a shroud when the devotee is cremated.

ARTIST'S RESALE RIGHT LAW ("DROIT DE SUITE")

Lots marked with AR next to the lot number may be subject to Droit de Suite.

Droit de Suite is payable on the hammer price of any artwork sold in the lifetime of the artist, or within 70 years of the artist's death. The buyer agrees to pay Dominic Winter Auctioneers Ltd. an amount equal to the resale royalty and we will pay such amount to the artist's collecting agent. Resale royalty applies where the Hammer price is 1,000 Euros or more and the amount cannot be more than 12,500 Euros per lot.

The amount is calculated as follows:

Royalty For the Portion of the Hammer Price (in Euros)

4.00% up to 50,000

3.00% between 50,000.01 and 200,000

1.00% between 200,000.01 and 350,000

0.50% between 350,000.01 and 500,000

Invoices will, as usual, be issued in Pounds Sterling. For the purposes of calculating the resale royalty the Pounds Sterling/Euro rate of exchange will be the European Central Bank reference rate on the day of the sale.

Please refer to the DACS website www.dacs.org.uk and the Artists' Collecting Society website www.artistscollectingsociety.org for further details.

CONDITIONS OF SALE AND BUSINESS

1. The Seller warrants to the Auctioneer and the buyer that he is the true owner or is properly authorised to sell the property by the true owner and is able to transfer good and marketable title to the property free from any third party claims.
2. (a) The highest bidder to be the buyer. If during the auction the Auctioneer considers that a dispute has arisen he has absolute authority to settle it or re-offer the lot. The Auctioneer may at his sole discretion determine the advance of bidding or refuse a bid, divide any lot, combine any two or more lots or withdraw any lot without prior notice.
(b) Where goods are bought at auction by a buyer who has entered into an agreement with another or others that the other or others (or some of them) shall abstain from bidding for the goods and the buyer or other party or one of the other parties is a dealer (as defined in the Auction Biddings Agreement Act 1927) the buyer warrants that the goods are bought bona fide on joint account.
3. The buyer shall pay the price at which a lot is knocked down by the Auctioneer to the buyer ("the hammer price") together with a premium of 20% of the hammer price. Where the lot is marked by an asterisk the premium will be subject to VAT at 20% which under the Auctioneer's Margin Scheme will form part of the buyer's premium on our invoice and will not be separately identified (the premium added to the hammer price will hereafter collectively be referred to as "the total sum due"). By making any bid the buyer acknowledges that his attention has been drawn to the fact that on the sale of any lot the Auctioneer will receive from the seller commission at its usual rates in addition to the said premium of 20% and assents to the Auctioneer receiving the said commission.
4. (a) The buyer shall forthwith upon the purchase give in his name and permanent address and pay to the Auctioneer immediately after the conclusion of the auction the total sum due.
(b) The buyer may be required to pay down during the course of the sale the whole or any part of the total sum due, and if he fails to do so after such request the lot or lots may at the Auctioneer's absolute discretion be put up again and resold immediately.
(c) The buyer shall at his own expense take away any lot or lots purchased no later than five working days after the auction day.
(d) The Auctioneer may at his own discretion agree credit terms with a buyer and extend the time limits for collection in special cases but otherwise payment shall be deemed to have been made only after the Auctioneer has received cash or a sterling banker's draft or the buyer's cheque has been cleared.
5. (a) If the buyer fails to pay for or take away any lot or lots pursuant to clause 4 or breaches any other condition of that clause the Auctioneer as agent for the seller shall be entitled after consultation with the seller to exercise one or other of the following rights:
(i) Rescind the sale of that or any other lots sold to the buyer who defaults and re-sell the lot or lots whereupon the defaulting buyer shall pay to the Auctioneer any shortfall between the proceeds of that sale after deduction of costs of re-sale and the total sum due. Any surplus shall belong to the seller.
(ii) Proceed for damages for breach of contract.
(b) Without prejudice to the Auctioneer's rights hereunder if any lots or lots are not collected within five days or such longer period as the Auctioneer may have agreed otherwise, the Auctioneer may charge the buyer a storage charge of £1.00 + VAT at the current rate per lot per day.
(c) Ownership of the lot purchased shall not pass to the buyer until he has paid to the Auctioneer the total sum due.
6. (a) The seller shall be entitled to place a reserve on any lot and the Auctioneer shall have the right to bid on behalf of the seller for any lot on which a reserve has been placed. A seller may not bid on any lot on which a reserve has been placed.
(b) Where any lot fails to sell, the Auctioneer shall notify the seller accordingly. The seller shall make arrangements either to re-offer the lot for sale or to collect the lot and may be asked to pay a commission not exceeding 50% of the selling commission and any special expenses incurred in cataloguing the lot.
(c) If such arrangements are not made within seven days of the notification the Auctioneer is empowered to sell the lot by auction or by private treaty at not less than the reserve price and to receive from the seller the normal selling commission and special expenses.
7. Any representation or statement by the Auctioneer in any catalogue, brochure or advertisement of forthcoming sales as to authorship, attribution, genuineness, origin, date, age, provenance, condition or estimated selling price is a statement of opinion only. Every person interested should exercise and rely on his own judgement as to such matters and neither the Auctioneer nor his servants or agents are responsible for the correctness of such opinions. No warranty whatsoever is given by the Auctioneer or the seller in respect of any lot and any express or implied warranties are hereby excluded.
8. (a) Notwithstanding any other terms of these conditions, if within fourteen days of the sale the Auctioneer has received from the buyer of any lot notice in writing that in his view the lot is a deliberate forgery and within fourteen days after such notification the buyer returns the same to the Auctioneer in the same condition as at the time of the sale and satisfies the Auctioneer that considered in the light of the entry in the catalogue the lot is a deliberate forgery then the sale of the lot will be rescinded and the purchase price of the same refunded. "A deliberate forgery" means a lot made with intention to deceive.
(b) A buyer's claim under this condition shall be limited to any amount paid to the Auctioneer for the lot and for the purpose of this condition the buyer shall be the person to whom the original invoice was made out by the Auctioneer.
9. Lots may be removed during the sale after full settlement in accordance with 4(d) hereof.
10. All goods delivered to the Auctioneer's premises will be deemed to be delivered for sale by auction unless otherwise stated in writing and will be catalogued and sold at the Auctioneer's discretion and accepted by the Auctioneer subject to all these conditions. In the case of miscellaneous books, the Auctioneer reserves the right to extract and dispose of books that, in the opinion of the Auctioneer at his absolute discretion, have no saleable value and, therefore, might detract from the saleability of the rest of the lot and the Auctioneer shall incur no liability to the seller, in respect of the books disposed of. By delivering the goods to the Auctioneer for inclusion in his auction sales each seller acknowledges that he/she accepts and agrees to all the conditions.
11. (a) Unless otherwise instructed in writing all goods on the Auctioneer's premises and in their custody will be held insured against the risks of fire, burglary, water damage and accidental breakage or damage. The value of the goods so covered will be the hammer price, or in the case of unsold lots the lower estimate, or in the case of loss or damage prior to the sale that which the specialised staff of the Auctioneer shall in their absolute discretion estimate to be the auction value of such goods.
(b) The Auctioneer shall not be responsible for damage to or the loss, theft, or destruction of any goods not so insured because of the owner's written instructions.
12. The Auctioneer shall remit the proceeds of the sale to the seller thirty days after the day of the auction provided that the Auctioneer has received the total sum due from the buyer. In all other cases the Auctioneer will remit the proceeds of the sale to the seller within seven days of the receipt by the Auctioneer of the total sum due. The Auctioneer will not be deemed to have received the total sum due until after any cheque delivered by the buyer has been cleared. In the event of the Auctioneer exercising his right to rescind the sale his obligation to the seller hereunder lapses.
13. In the case of the seller withdrawing instructions to the Auctioneer to sell any lot or lots, the Auctioneer may charge a fee of 12.5% of the Auctioneer's middle estimate of the auction price of the lot withdrawn together with Value Added Tax thereon and any expenses incurred in respect of the lot or lots.
14. The Auctioneer's current standard notices and information (i.e. Collation and Amendments) will apply to any contract with the Auctioneer as if incorporated herein.
15. These conditions shall be governed by and construed in accordance with English Law.
